BELGIANS ACCUSE GERMANS OF MASSACRE

BRUSSELS, Aug. 10.—The Belgian War Office issued a statement this afternoon saying that all the residents of the village of Soiron, near Pepinster, were massacred by German troops because three gardners, working in a field, fired upon a detachment of 200 Germans, stationed at the farmhouse of which all the garden hands were employes. An official statement says the three gardners were first shot down and then all the village put to the sword.

[General Von Emmich has twice warned the Belgians that "sniping" by civilians would not be permitted. When he first entered Belgium he issued a warning, charging that there had been some fighting by civilians. Yesterday he issued a proclamation, repeating this charge and threatening to bombard Liege if it were repeated.]

Latest snapshot of Emperor Wilhelm, accompanied by Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg. Arrow points to the Kaiser. The Kaiser has raced from Berlin to the front by automobile, to take personal command of the main German Army. EMPEROR WILLIAM TO LEAD HIS GREAT ARMY IN BATTLE

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Emperor William has taken personal command of his troops and Germany is mobilizing 1,000,000 more men for the invasion of France, according to dispatches received today by the Exchange Telegraph Company and the Daily Telegraph.

The Rome correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company wired that it was authoritatively stated there that the Kaiser had reached Aix-la-Chapelle to take up his position with the field forces. It was from this city that the German forces were hurled into Belgium in an attempt to strike the weakest part of the French frontier.

The Daily Telegraph received a message from its Brussels correspondent stating that the German Army would immediately be increased by 1,000,000 more troops and these would be used in the attack upon France.

The Landsturm, or home defence force, is being drawn upon for this additional force.

Reports from other sources say there are already

ENGLAND TO STRIP KAISER OF COLONIES

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The seizure of Togoland, the German possession on the gold coast of Africa, is only the opening gun in a campaign by England that will strip the Teutonic Empire of all its colonial possessions. It was learned today that Colonial Secretary Harcourt, Lord Kitchener, the War Secretary, and Winston Spencer Churchill, head of the Admiralty, held a conference last Thursday at which the campaign against the German colonies was carefully mapped out. The first blow was struck at Togoland. Though this was the smallest of the German possessions in Africa, covering only 33,700 square miles, it is very rich in mines. Not far below it on the west coast is Kamerun. This district covers 190,600 square miles and is very fertile.

On the southwest coast are Great Namaqua and Damara. They contain 317,953 square miles, being the second largest German possession on the continent. Lying adjacent to the British possessions in South Africa, they will udoubtedly be added to that territory if Germany is overwhelmed in the general European conflict.

German East Africa, on the east coast, is the largest and most important German holding in Africa. It covers 365,655 square miles.

ABANDONS SERVIA CAMPAIGN.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The Reuter News Agency announced this afternoon that it had learned from an authoritative source that the Austrians had temporarily abandoned the attempted invasion of Servia and had taken up a strong position in their own territory awaiting an attack.

FRENCH CAPTURE 2 PASSES.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—The War Office announced today that the French troops invading Alsace had captured the strong Bonhomme and Sainte Marie passes in the Vosges Mountains. It was officially admitted that the French loss was heavy, but no estimate was given.

BATTLE ON FRONTIER

PARIS, Aug. 10.—It is reported that a big battle between German and French troops is now going on on the frontier. It is supposed that the German troops engaged are those that crossed the frontier at Esch early today, although the War Office has given out no details. The War Ministry is expected to confirm the capture of Colmar in a short time. Colmar is in Alsace.

MAKES CALL IN VAN.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—Gabriele C. D'Annunzio is now paying calls in a furniture van drawn by an old horse which was refused by the army. The poet called at the Italian embassy yesterday in this conveyance to get a passport. He had been forced to resort to the strange vehicle because of the scarcity of automobiles.

KAISER TO LEAD 1,900,000 GERMANS IN ADVANCE UPON FRANCE

An Explanation of War News

It must be noted that most of the war news is coming from English, French, Belgian and Russian sources, and therefore presents their views of the situation, which must necessarily differ widely from the German view.

Such news as comes from Berlin shows the results of the fighting both on land and sea in a different light.

EMPEROR RUSHES TO FRONT IN AUTO

900,000 German troops in operation against France. With 1,000,000 more men this force will be increased to 1,900,000, the greatest army ever set in movement in the history of European wars.

Another Rome dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company carries a report sent from Basle, Switzerland, that 30,000 Austrian troops had entered Swiss territory at Constance on their way to reinforce the German troops.

SEA VICTORY CONFIRMED.

The Admiralty today confirmed the report of the sinking of the German submarine U15 in an attack upon British warships and denied rumors that several British vessels had been sunk in a night attack.

It is understood that all the twelve men in the crew of the U15 were drowned.

The managing director of the Exchange Telegraph Company, who has gone to Brussels, reported today that he had learned from a source absolutely reliable that the forts at Liege are still intact, that not one has been captured and that the Belgian army was still able to prevent the German advance.

That a conflict between Japanese and German warships in the Far East may be ordered is indicated by a Reuter dispatch received here today from Tokio. It says:

"It is believed that Japan will adhere to the spirit of the Anglo-Japanese alliance to the very extreme limit, the whereabouts of the German squadron is not disclosed, but it is reported to be menacing British shipping.

The entire Japanese fleet has sailed from Yokosuka under sealed orders.

AWAIT BIG SEA FIGHT.

A dispatch from Berne, Switzerland, reports that forty-eight trains of Austrian troops have arrived at Leopoldshove, Baden, to co-operate with the German forces. The main interest of London, however, centred in the hidden movements of the British fleet and the possibility of an immediate conflict that will determine naval supremacy. The Times' military expert says:

"At the present moment, when all eyes are directed toward Liege, Lorraine and Alsace, it is necessary to state plainly that our main and important military interest does not lie here, but is directed toward the German coast."

The latest copies of the official Berlin newspaper, Lokal Anzeiger, brought to England by fugitives from Germany, give their readers plainly to understand that the German navy will take the offensive and will cooperate with the German army in offensive operations.

GERMANS REPORT ROUT

ROTTERDAM, Aug. 10.—The German legation at The Hague has issued the following statement:

"Russian troops on the frontier have been driven back. A Russian cavalry brigade at Soldau was defeated and a Russian division at Insterburg destroyed. East Prussia is free of the enemy. The German losses are negligible.

"Szenthtochau, Kalisch, Wielun and Kibarty and other Russian frontier stations are in the hands of Germany.

"The German fleet, until now, has suffered no losses. It threatens the eastern seaboard of Russia. Libau and Bona have been bombarded successfully.

"The cruiser Goeben has destroyed the French transport basis in Bona and devastated Philippeville.

NOTED BRITON LAUDS COURTESY OF GERMANS

ROTTERDAM, Aug. 10.—Elias Bancroft, the prominent English artist who is honorary secretary of the Manchester Academy of Fine Arts, has arrived here from Rothenburg, Ger., where he was painting at the outbreak of the war. He tells of the great courtesy and kindness of German officials.

"Last Sunday the Mayor of Rothenburg advised me to return at once to England," he said. "He gave me not merely my passport, but wrote on it, 'Do not suspect these people of being spies.' So we set out Wednesday, my wife, who is an artist like myself, my son and daughter.

"At the station an official said: 'Do not be alarmed, you will not be suspected. You will have full protection.' We were accompanied to the train by a government official. He was addressed as colonel, but was in mufti.

"At Schaffenburg we were detained for thirty-six hours. On alighting from the train we were conducted to a guard room. After remaining four hours and feeling ill I went to the door for air. An officer asked, 'Are you ill?' I replied, 'Yes.'

"The officer then conducted us to a first-class waiting room and gave us permission to purchase food. On learning I had little money the officer ordered food for us to be served at half price. He offered to escort us to a hotel, but I preferred the waiting room to avoid any hostile demonstration in case the mob took us for Russian spies.

"At Mayence an escort of thirty soldiers was waiting for us.

"There was a hostile demonstration, but the soldiers stood shoulder to shoulder around.

"We were taken to a waiting room where an officer said: 'Give me your word of honor not to leave and I will withdraw the guard, thereby avoid attracting attention to you.'

"He returned to us when the train arrived.

"We traveled in military trains often surrounded by excited men. On leaving the train at Coblenz the soldiers cheered us and bade us adieus saying: 'If the English were like these why do we quarrel?'

"A policeman examined our papers and after reading them, returned them to us and saluted.

"Thank you sir,' he added and said: 'These people must not be molested.'

"I have seen nothing so striking as the willing way the German soldiers go to the front. They do not want war, but are eager to respond to their country's call."

WAR BULLETINS

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The Admiralty announces one of the cruiser squadrons of the main fleet has been attacked by German submarines. None of the British ships was damaged. One German submarine boat was sunk. The scene of fighting is not named.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The German foreign office has notified Ambassador Gerard that all German ports have been mined. The ambassador reports the English Channel has been mined but does not say by whom.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 10.—Russian troops have penetrated through the valley of the River Styr, and have entered Austrian territory, driving the Austrians before them.

AUSTRIA SEEKS ITALY'S AID.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—Though France has demanded an explanation from Vienna of the fact that Austrian troops are being sent to the French frontier, the Republic will not declare war upon Austria. The French government understands that Austria is trying to provoke a declaration of war in order to induce Italy to give her assistance to Emperor Francis Joseph.

FRENCH LOSS AT MUELHAUSEN 100.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—The War Ministry announced today that the French loss at Muelhausen was only 100 killed and wounded. It added that the French troops are being held at Muelhausen.

BOSNIA REVOLTS.

ROME, Aug. 10.—Dispatches received here today confirm reports of a revolt against Austria-Hungary in Bosnia. They state that the revolutionists have vowed to free the assassins of Archduke Francis Ferdinand, who are confined at Sarajevo. Attempts have been made to assassinate Austrian officials in several towns.

INUNDATE FRONTIER.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—It is officially stated that the Germans are attempting to delay the French advance upon Metz by trying to inundate the valley of the River Seille, which flows across the frontier about midway between Metz and the French fortress of Nancy.

KEEP SHIPS AT HOME.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—"The United States will keep her warships near home for some time to come," said Secretary of the Navy Daniels today, when shown a report from Tokio to the effect that the American fleet is to visit Asia.

LIBAU NOT DESTROYED.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The Russian-American steamship line today received a cablegram from Libau, Russia, which read: "Money in Russian banks all safe." The message disproves reports that Libau has been destroyed by a German fleet.

Herrick Takes Steps to Free Huntingtons

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Confirmation of the arrest and imprisonment of Archer M. Huntington, president of the Hispanic Society, and his wife by German authorities reached the State Department today through Ambassador Herrick at Paris. Herrick cables as follows:

"Have learned through Huntington's chauffeur that Huntington and wife have been arrested and confined in the Grand Hotel at Nuremberg. Have telegraphed to Berlin by way of Rome to secure their release."

No further word has reached the State Department concerning the Huntingtons, secretary Bryan stated, but he hoped to soon receive notice of their release.

Typos Hold 60th Annual Convention

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 10.—The International Typographical Union formally opened its sixtieth convention here today, President James M. Duncan presiding. Appointment of officers and committees for the convention followed by a business session on the program. A sail to Newport is scheduled Tuesday. Wednesday the delegates will hold a business meeting.

Insane Hungarian Tries to See Wilson

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Louis Vauss, a Hungarian, believed to be insane, tried to gain access to the White House grounds today. He declared that the American people wanted to kill him and that he wanted to talk to the President. He was arrested.

GERMANS IN LIEGE BUT FORTS HOLD OUT

BRUSSELS, Aug. 10.—General Von Emmich, commander of the German forces that succeeded in forcing their way into the city of Liege after they had been repulsed for four days, demanded the surrender of the forts surrounding the city. General Leman, the Belgian commander, refused to comply, according to a statement issued at the War Ministry today. This says:

"The Germans, on seeing spaces between the forts open before them, entered in small groups during the evening. Among those who entered were General Von Emmich, commander of the Tenth Army Corps, and his staff. At the citadel, which is in the barracks, the governor and the burgomaster of Liege were informed that unless the towns and forts surrendered the Germans would bombard the town and raze it completely. On orders from his government the governor then left the town.

"Seventeen notables of the city, headed by the bishop, burgomaster and sheriff with some deputies proceeded to the citadel and begged General Von Emmich not to bombard the town. The general replied that the town and forts must surrender or he would begin the bombardment.

"The Germans asserted that the peasants in the district had committed hostile acts against them.

"All the members of the deputation were detained as hostages, and it is not yet known whether they have since been liberated."

PROCLAIM MARTIAL LAW.

"The Gazette announced today that a secret German arms depot full of weapons and ammunition, had been discovered here. It was due to this fact that the government archives were removed to Antwerp and martial law proclaimed throughout the country.

It is stated at the War Ministry that the Germans have ceased their forward movement along the River Ourthe, which joins the Meuse, a short distance above Liege, and a movement north of Liege in the direction of Brussels is expected.

With a large German force investing the Liege forts, the heavy movement of the German forces will be directed against Namur, which is strongly fortified. It was reported today that the Germans are proceeding rapidly toward France through Escharawzette. They have passed the village of Merl.

Patriotic enthusiasm is running high as a result of the brilliant work of the Belgian troops at Liege. The War Ministry announces that 40,000 volunteers enlisted during the last forty-eight hours.

According to the Etoile Belge, the German forces that occupied the city of Liege numbered 10,000 men and effected their entry between Forts Evegne and Fleron. The Etoile Belge's account says:

"General Von Emmich immediately issued a proclamation declaring that civilians had fired upon his soldiers and warning the city that if the offence were repeated the city would be bombarded by the artillery stationed in the citadel. There is, however, little liklihood of anything so frightful happening the inhabitants having been warned already by the burgomaster not to carry any arms.

LEMAN NEARLY CAPTURED.

"The Germans have taken up their abode in the university schools and other public buildings, but are conducting themselves well and paying for everything they get in the few shops still open.

"General Leman had a narrow escape from capture when the Germans entered. Colonel Marchand of his staff was shot dead by General Leman's side, but the latter escaped over a foundry wall with the help of a plant soldier of his bodyguard. Several rifles were emptied after General Leman, but all missed."

FALSE NEWS ARRESTS.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—It was reported today that Austria was sending her Fifteenth Army Corps across Germany to the French frontier. This corps is composed of Slav subjects, who, it was thought, might not fight against Russia. The Austrian Ambassador has been requested to make a declaration of Austria's intention toward France.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The Prince of Wales left Buckingham Palace early today to join his regiment, the grenadier guards, at Warley Barracks, Brentwood.

4 GERMANS STARVING.

GERMAN MISTAKE AT LIEGE CHECKS AGGRESSIVE CAMPAIGN BY KAISER

DELAYED CAPTURE IMPORTANT FACTOR

By DR. E. J. DILLON,
Special War Correspondent of the Boston American and the London Daily Telegraph.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 10.—Military experts here hold that some days must elapse before important aggressive operations can be resumed by the German army. They explain the miscalculation of the invaders as follows:

Germany secretly moved forward about 900,000 men toward France by the Belgian and Russian frontiers during the week ending August 2, with the object of being able to surprise and overpower the resisting forces at the very outset of the war.

THE TERRITORIAL ARMY.

They will cause the definite concentration of the German army, which includes the second line of another million men.

This operation at present is in full swing. It involves the mobilization of the Landsturm, or territorial army.

According to trustworthy private advices received here, the officer commanding the Cologne military district has already called all the men of the Landsturm to arms.

A tremendous effort will surely be put forth to burst through the France-Belgian barriers of forts and men.

In view of this mighty tide and the relatively narrow passage, it is impossible that they may finally choose the route northwards of Vise and violate Dutch territory.

It is noteworthy that during the fierce fighting of the past few days a disproportionately large number of officers, compared with privates, were disabled, owing to the distinctive uniforms among officers. There was also a disproportionately large percentage of wounded among the surgeons, whose uniforms are still more conspicuous. The War Minister's attention has been drawn to the advisability of rendering outward marks of rank less noticeable.

The Belgian government is not expelling civilian Germans, although the country is infested with spies who make desperate efforts to reveal and frustrate military plans.

In the German Consulate and a German school wireless telegraphy apparatus was discovered. Two sons of a principal German firm in Antwerp, established more than twenty years, were arrested.

At the School of Aviation the caretaker, of German nationality, was discovered Friday working a wireless apparatus. He was arrested, tried and condemned.

Germans in Belgium are proving relentless enemies to their hosts. When quitting the city on Friday some of them exclaimed: "We are going now, but we will return shortly, escorted by troops."

PRISONERS TREATED KINDLY.

Bitterness against Germany in Antwerp is intense, but the German prisoners and wounded are treated with the utmost consideration. The Flemish population in Belgium is making heroic sacrifices. In the smiling suburbs of Antwerp gardens, lawns, thickets and luxurious villas are being disfigured beyond recognition by military strategists. The owners look on with grim approval at the destruction of their cherished property for use as hospitals.

Handelsblad learns six spies were shot at Antwerp and three at Louvain. An automobile was stopped in the main street of Antwerp containing four men in Belgian uniforms. They proved spies, the uniforms having been taken from the dead in battle. A Jesuit priest's suspicions were aroused by the false beard of a man posing as a missionary. The priest questioned the man in Latin, and he was unable to respond. The priest gave him in charge as a suspect.

The report that the forts around Liege have been captured by the Germans is absolutely denied by a Belgian who arrived here during the night.

"I left Liege Saturday morning," he said. "Liege was still defending itself valiantly. One fort was then in the hands of the Germans. An armistice of three hours was agreed upon to bury the dead who lay around."

The man, who evidently was highly wrought up after his terrible experience, declined to say more.

Belgian papers say all the forts are holding out and that the morale of the Belgian troops is unbroken. German prisoners captured had very low cartridges, and it is assumed the Germans had difficulty in bring up ammunition.

BUSINESS MEN AND GERMANS.

The narrative of how the neutrality of Luxemburg was violated is interesting. Sunday morning, twenty-four hours before the declaration of war, while I was painfully travelling through Bavaria toward the Rhine, the population of Luxemburg awakened to find all ways of communication in German hands. Everywhere were German soldiers.

What most astonished these simple minded citizens was that detachments were commanded by employes of commercial and industrial firms established in Luxemburg. Now attired in military uniforms, they were at the head of bodies of German troops leading them to places where perquisitions might be made or arrests effected, and giving them the benefit of admirable knowledge of the town and people.

This they did with noteworthy results. They denounced some 200 Alsatians, who escaped from the German army and who naturally reckoned on a safe asylum in neutral Luxemburg.

These men were roused from sleep and spirited away, their appeal answered by violence or threats. The German Major first to cross the Adolf bridge found his way barred by Cabinet Minister M. Eyschen, who arrived in a motor and turned the car lengthwise across the bridge. Taking out a copy of the Berlin treaty, he showed it to the German officer, who remarked:

"I am acquainted with it, but have orders which I must execute immediately."

Afterward Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide drove up in an automobile. She also turned it lengthwise across the bridge, saying:

"The neutrality of Luxemburg must be respected. I will telegraph to the Kaiser."

SILENCES ARCH DUCHESS.

The Major curtly answered: "You had better go home quietly." The commander of the Luxemburg army, Van Dyck, came up just then and remonstrated with the German officer, who retorted: "If these are not your methods, they are ours."

Putting a revolver to the commander's head he cried: "Clear out!"

Soon afterward the work of military destruction began, villas and farmhouses being demolished and thickets cut down to clear the way for artillery fire.

Terror has reigned through Luxemburg since then. Farmers with provisions are being stopped and wagons seized. One who grumbled was arrested and taken before a courtmartial. He has not been heard of since. From Luxemburg to Hodange fields are devastated, houses razed to the ground and trenches dug.

Whoever casts a glance at the military operations is arrested as a spy. In a word, the population of the Grand Duchy is learning the meaning of the term "reign of terror."

One of the reliances of the German army if it becomes necessary to defend German territory. A great number of motor boats, carrying high power machine guns, are afloat upon the Rhine River, and would be used to repel invaders in any attempt to cross the river. The German regiments also carry guns arranged for mounting in motor boats on foreign waters if the opportunity comes.

AUSTRIA BLAMED BY RUSSIAN MINISTER

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 10.—Foreign Minister Sazonoff today submitted to the Duma a complete statement dealing with the negotiations leading up to the war between Russia and Germany and Austria.

M. Sazonoff declared that Austria was responsible for the great conflict and the following charges were made against the Austrian government:

That it had attempted to overthrow Russia's position in the Balkans.

That it had sown fratricidal strife between Bulgaria and the other nations in the one-time Balkan league.

That the Austrian attempts to make Servia an "Austrian vassal state" was a blow struck indirectly at Russia.

The Russian foreign minister said that Germany could easily have stayed Austria's hand, but that the Kaiser chose in favor of war, believing that the present time was propitious for German arms to sweep Europe and raise German military prestige to a point hitherto unattained.

Russia tried to avert the war, M. Sazonoff declared, but all the peaceful overtures made to Berlin were rejected. The word of Czar Nicholas II. had been pledged, the statesman said, that Russia would not resort to force so long as there was a possibility of an amicable adjustment.

"Germany declared war and at once began to trample under foot the recognized rights of neutral states in such a manner as to arouse the whole civilized world," said M. Sazonoff.

In conclusion the Russian foreign minister said:

"I cannot help bowing to the heroism of the Belgian people, who have fought so nobly and so gallantly against such enormous odds."

CAILLAUX ENLISTS.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—Joseph Caillaux, former premier, has joined the French army, and has been attached to the treasury department as inspector of finances.

MOB GERMAN PEOPLE LIVING IN BELGIUM

BERLIN, Aug. 10, via London—Mobbing of German residents in Belgium and destruction of their property by Belgian mobs are described in a dispatch just received here from the Goch correspondent of the official Berlin news agency.

After martial law was declared throughout Belgium on Saturday, and all Germans had been ordered to leave at once, some Belgian mobs gathered in the various cities of size and demolished most of the stores and shops that were owned by Germans, or which dealt in German goods.

Homes of Germans were stoned, windows smashed and in some cases the doors were splintered with axes. Germans in the streets were attacked. Thousands of Germans already have left Belgium for Holland under the protection of the American consul, and there are few Germans left in Belgium. These are planning to leave in a day or two at the latest.

NEXT GREAT BATTLE WILL BE FOUGHT AT BREISACH, ON RHINE

PARIS WILD OVER ALSATIAN SUCCESS

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—The French troops invading Germany and those co-operating with the Belgians are progressing steadily, it was stated at the War Ministry today. At the same time announcement was made by President Poincare that the French republic had conferred a military medal upon King Albert of Belgium.

It is reported that the French army that occupied Altkirch and Muelhausen has also taken Colmar, leaving the road to Breisach open. Neubreisach, just across the river from Breisach, is fortified, but the difficulty of reducing it will not be great.

Battle on Banks of Rhine

Military officials believe the first decisive battle in which the troops invading Alsatia will figure will be fought at Breisach, on the Rhine. This place is strongly fortified and a large force of Germans have concentrated there.

Patrols of the French army in Belgium have covered the hilly region of Eifel in Rhennish Prussia on the left bank of the Rhine. They had some skirmishes with Germans along the River Ourthe and east of Neuf Chateau.

Several German squadrons yielded ground to the French troops and fell back to the vicinity of Tongres. A number of German prisoners that were taken were sent to Namur and Charleville.

Liege Army Going South

According to official reports received by the war ministry the Germans at Liege seem to be recovering and provisioning. It is expected that the main body of the Germans at Liege will now be sent south to meet the French.

There is no confirmation of the report that 30,000 German and 15,000 French troops had been killed in the fighting at Altkirch and the figures are believed to have been greatly exaggerated. As far as can be learned today, the Germans at Altkirch made no effective resistance.

The French Minister of War makes the following statement today:

During the march from Altkirch the French troops passed the abandoned earthworks and defences of Muelhausen. The populace came out from the town and in a frenzy of delight welcomed the French troops. The cavalry, galloping through the streets, pursued the German rear guard. The French established themselves north of Muelhausen.

Rout is the only word with which to describe the German retreat. The French losses were not excessive when the result is considered. The occupation of Muelhausen, the great industrial and intellectual centre of Alsace, will reverberate throughout Europe.

The Germans retired in the direction of Neu-Breisach. The whole of Alsace will rise against them and aggravate their position.

MARTIAL LAW IN ALSACE.

Before retiring from Muelhausen the German troops are reported to have set fire to numerous buildings, especially warehouses where food and forage were stored. The forest of Hard, near Colmar, is said to have been razed.

Martial law is established in Alsace, where, it is said, the Germans announced that any person suspected of sympathizing with the French would be executed.

All Paris is rejoicing over the successful invasion of Alsace.

Numerous wreaths were placed upon the Strassburg statue and women knelt about it uttering prayers of thanksgiving that France was avenging her defeats suffered in 1870.

The following proclamation to the people of Alsace has been issued by the French commander, General Joffre:

After forty-four years of sorrowful waiting, French soldiers once more tread the soil of your noble country. They are pioneers in a great work of revenge. For them, what emotions it calls forth and what pride to complete the work they have begun at the sacrifice of their lives.

The French nation unanimously urges them on and in the folds of their flag are inscribed the magic words, "Right and Liberty." Long live Alsace! Long live France!

TAKE SPY SUSPECTS.

The French government is exercising the utmost vigilance, and it is resulting in the arrest of scores of Germans accused of being spies.

Some of these spies are accoutered as French army cadets and French army aviators. They are adepts in the French language and have been fraternizing with French officers and soldiers in order to gather such information as they can as to the strength and disposition of the French forces.

Even women among the sympathizers of the German cause are imperilling their lives to gather information for the German army. Some of them have disguised themselves as sisters of charity and have applied to the war department for permission to accompany the French forces as nurses.

Three martial courts have been instituted here and a number of these spies have been tried, but their fate has been kept secret.

COURAGE OF GERMAN SCOUTS.

The courage and enterprise displayed by the German scouts is amazing. It has even excited the admiration of the enemy.

Detached bodies of German scouts have penetrated far into French soil near Dinard. Their method is to ride toward an objective point, usually a small city, in small bodies, so as to avoid attracting the attention of the French. After a junction has been formed the Germans attack the city with the object of destroying it. Numerous attempts of this kind have been made, but only a few of them have been successful.

A large detachment of German Uhlans has concentrated in the woods north of the Dinard and the French are surrounding them.

The Germans operating around Liege have begun to feel their way south. This has been shown by the fact that a number of skirmishes have occurred between detachments of German and French cavalrymen east of Namur. The Germans had been sent out to reconnoitre and to test the strength of the enemy.

THRILLING AIR FLIGHTS.

Correspondents accounts of the fighting around Liege contain stories of thrilling air fights between Belgian and German aerial squadrons. The aerial conflicts were desultory and deadly. They gave the world the first glimpse of battles in the air.

The Germans mainly pinned their faith to dirigible balloons while the Belgians and the French are relying upon aeroplanes.

A belated dispatch gives an account of a battle in mid air between a Zeppelin dirigible and a Belgian aeroplane during the early stages of the fighting at Liege.

The German airship had been sent over Liege to make a reconnaissance. As soon as the balloon was descried by the forts a Belgian aviator was sent in pursuit. The aviator, equipped with a rifle and automatic pistol, set out in a swift and powerful monoplane. The Belgian, disdaining the use of fire arms, drove his machine against the gas bag of the big balloon, risking his own life in an attempt to destroy the dirigible. The bag was punctured and the Zeppelin dropped, useless and helpless.

After the destruction of this Zeppelin the Germans did not risk any more of their balloons over the city, but contented themselves with sending dirigibles skyward over their own lines to secure information about the enemy. The Belgians kept up a continuous fire upon these balloons, but it was futile as the guns could not be elevated sufficiently to get the range.

PRINT DESIGNS OF UNIFORMS.

In order to prevent troops from attacking their allies the Servian and Belgian governments have printed designs of all the uniforms worn by Belgian, British and French soldiers and have distributed them among their forces.

There have been sporadic demonstrations against Emperor William and Crown Prince Frederick William in the German capital, according to a dispatch printed in Le Figaro today. This dispatch was received from Brussels and was based upon a story told there by two of the engineers, who arrived in the Belgian capital from Berlin after a great deal of difficulty.

Anti-Militarists cried "Down with the Emperor" and "Down with the Crown Prince" on Unter Den Linden, the principal street of Berlin, but they were soon silenced so tremendous is the sentiment in favor of war in Germany.

FRENCH GUNS CAN MOW DOWN REGIMENTS

By BURTON FRAZIER.
Staff Correspondent of the International News Service.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Such slaughter as the world has never known before in warfare will mark the battles of the grand armies of France and Germany when they clash upon the field, if today's prophesies by the foreign military experts are borne out.

The eyes of all the foreign war department officials are turned toward the theatre of war, where the advantages of either French or German ordnance will be established in blood and carnage.

Since the days of Napoleon, who was himself an artillery officer, French military experts have specialized in light and heavy ordnance. The fruits of practically 100 years of experiments are constituted in guns of such murderous fire that a platoon of them could mow down whole regiments.

GUARD GUN SECRETS.

The ultra-modern guns of the French, both heavy artillery and quick-firing machines, are secretly manufactured, and so zealously is the secret of their construction guarded that it has not been imparted even to the closest allies of the French.

The artillery is the backbone of the French army. The French officers claim that there is no enemy that can stand before their guns.

There are three kinds of artillery in use in the French army. One of these is the light machine gun, 72 mm., the second is a heavier gun of 155 m.m. and the third is the huge siege gun, which hurls heavy shrapnel shells.

The gunfire from the lighter ordnance does not strike the ranks of the enemy direct, but is aimed above them. The shells burst about 45 feet above the ground and release a shower of small bullets which scatter downward. No matter how fast the enemy may retreat the discharges from these guns are so rapid that they cannot get out of range.

FORTY SHELLS A MINUTE.

These machine guns are constructed to move from right to left automatically, covering about a quarter of a mile of territory and can throw forty shells a minute.

Whenever the French are compelled to abandon one of their high-power cannons they destroy it so it can never be used again. By removing a small keyy called the "clavate," which resembles the key of a Yale lock, the gun is out of service and the vital parts drop apart. These keys have many convolutions so that they cannot be exactly duplicate.

The rapid firers are generally used as supports of batteries of heavy artillery to prevent the latter's capture by means of charges.

$13,000,000 IN GOLD FROM LINER CECILIE SAFE IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Aug. 10. — Securely locked in four steel express cars and accompanied by forty armed guards the $13,000,000 of gold coin from the German line Kronprinzessin Cecilie, arrived here today from Bar Harbor, Me.

The gold and silver were transported across Frenchman's Bay at Bar Harbor to the Maine Central railroad terminal at Mount Desert Ferry by the revenue cutter Androscoggin. During this process the detectives and messengers were augmented by an armed squad of marines. The treasure train proceeded to New York via Worcester.

AMERICAN EXODUS WILL SOON BE NORMAL

By LAWRENCE ELSTON.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The exodus of Americans is expected to go back to normal before the end of this week. Most of the Americans who wanted to get back to the United States already are on their way or will start back soon. The others, not fearing any trouble in London, will remain there for an indefinite time.

A dispatch from Paris today stated that about 1,500 Americans in that city and the nearby towns had made application to U. S. Ambassador Herrick for accommodations on American government transports, in case Herrick deems it necessary to summon them. The liner Virginia, which sailed from Southampton, carried a big crowd. Included in its list of passengers were G. H. Hoops and V. G. Lamhard, of Boston.

Among the recent arrivals here are Philip Mexon, of Springfield, Mass.; Edwin Arnold, of Boston, and Colonel Richard Nelse, commander of the Atlantic Province headquarters of the Salvation Army, with headquarters in Philadelphia. Nelse had some thrilling experiences before reaching here, being mistaken several times for a German spy.

CAPTURE MONEY CARS.

BERLIN, Aug. 10.—Three motor cars carrying large sums of money were captured by the German population and troops while trying to cross the Russian frontier.

SPEAK ONLY FRENCH.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—No one can talk by telephone in France in any language but French. If a single word is uttered in English communication will be cut off.

GERMANIZE TOWN.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 10.—The newspaper Le Soir says that the Belgian town of Verviers, fourteen miles east, has been completely Germanized. A German burgomaster has replaced the Belgian official, who has been arrested.

ATLAS A. A. TO HOLD BIG ALL-STAR BOXING BILL AT ARENA TOMORROW NIGHT

ATLAS CLUB TO HOLD ALL-STAR CARD OF BOUTS

By JACK CONWAY.

THE fifth chesters will be obliged to remain in the background for the next few months, as the local pugilistic stage this week is the Atlas A. A. has arranged another of its popular all-star cards. There will be four six-round bouts, and we should surmise the deep-old fight fans will plenty of excitement, boxing and a little hard hitting.

The majority of the bouts will perform are young, strong and ambitious and are eager to work their way to the top. Consequently, they consequently fans should be out for a full measure of entertainment.

Frankie Mack, who will clash with Charley Beyers of the South End, is one of the best boys in the New England lightweight championship. Mack is a clever boxer and hard hitter, but is not a bit bashful in stating that he will breeze in a winner at the Atlas.

THE bout between Johnny Muncie of Charlestown and Pinkey Royle, the Lowell featherweight, has also aroused a great deal of interest and should furnish plenty of sport. These two boys met at the final show of the University Club of Cambridge, and Muncie was declared a winner. Royle's supporters claimed after the contest that the referee favored the Charlestown boy, and they believe that their favorite will prove he is Muncie's master tomorrow evening.

THE opening tussle will be between Eddie Butler of Beaumont and Jack Donnelly, who hails from Providence. Butler won from Eddie Flynn, the Lynn lightweight, at the last show of the Atlas Club. He is a rugged, two-handed fighter and declares he will vanquish Donnelly. The latter, however, has a reputation of a hard hitter and may surprise Butler.

The other bout will be between Al Delmont, the veteran Northern boxer, and "Tiger" Young of New York. Al Delmont is making a "come back" campaign and will try his best to conquer Young.

GILBERT GALLANT, Chelsea's husky lightweight, will not be idle long. After taking his two weeks' rest in the country, Alex McLean's protege will step into the ring for a twenty-round bout with Chick Wat of Holyoke, which is to be held at Middletown, Ct., on Labor Day. The boys have agreed to make 130 pounds at 3 o'clock sharp for the tussle. The contest will be staged in the Middletown ball park in the afternoon of the holiday.

JIMMY CHICK, promoter of the bout, originally planned to match his brother with Johnny Dundee, but the little Chelsea boxer is not in the best of condition now and he would not be able to box on Labor Day. The Middletown promoters were very anxious to see the youth of Gallant's ability to oppose the Holyoke boy, as both are among the leading featherweight performers in the East and the fans should witness a hotly contested and Gallant fought in Westfield last Winter and the Chelsea boy got the best of the going. West is out to reverse the tables on Labor Day. The managers of both men have agreed to post a forfeit of 25 with the AMERICAN to bind the bout.

MATTY BALDWIN and "Chuck" Lustig will clash in the opening show of Al Norton's club in Manchester, N. H., on Labor Day night. Baldwin has been fighting at a lively pace of late and expects to defeat Lustig. He has been training for the match at his farm in Lynnfield and says that he will be satisfied with Eddie Murphy of South Boston and Frankie Nelson, the New York lightweight, have been signed to box at the same club on August 19.

LOU KELLY, the East Boston sport-ing man, is preparing Joe Farren for a long series of 20-round bouts. Kelly claims that Farren is the best welterweight in New England, and he says that he would be willing to back a protege for a title whirl with Mike Glover of South Boston.

JOE CHICK, the Gloucester mid-dleweight, who has been out for several months on account of a broken hand, will be back in ring midget with a few weeks. Joe the Gloucester boy is right, he is a hard man to beat, as he usually ends forcing the fighting in all of his contests and refuses to permit his opponent to rest for any length of time.

THE management of the Atlas A. A. announces that "Porky" Flynn and Battling Levinsky have not yet been matched to meet at the Arena on August 19. Flynn has agreed to exchange blows with the New Yorker, but Danny Morgan, signed to box the seven-day fighter, has failed to come to terms with Messrs. Murray, McGann & Co.

Boston Lands Place in Billiard League

The franchise for Boston in the Champion Billiard Players' League has been granted to the Boston Imperial Room, which means that eight of the leading billiard players of the world will compete in a series of important matches—one a month—from October to June.

The following stars comprise the organization: Roll Yamada, George Sutton, George Slosson, Ora Morningstar, Harry Clifton and Albert Cutler. It can be readily seen that competition of the highest class will be seen in these matches.

In granting the franchise to the Imperial, the league gives the exclusive privilege of the above players' services in this city during the coming season, and no other room can obtain them for exhibition purposes during that period.

HORSEMEN PICK WILLIAMS TO BREAK RECORDS

Is Dan Patch, 1:55¼, champion of all the champion pacers, finally going to be dethroned? Is the impossible going to be accomplished again? The excitement of the fast light harness horse sport answer "Yes" to both questions. The veterans, men who ought to know, without the least bit of hesitation predict that the record they once declared would never be equaled will in a short while be sent glimmering.

The tip they give us is that Williams, 2:06, champion four-year-old pacer, will eventually prove the world's fastest pacer, and eclipse the wonderful record hung up in 1905 by Dan Patch, which is held.

Just how much William can shade two minutes is still a matter of conjecture. He has never exhibited his true speed. The unbeaten pacer takes them all just as they come. He sprints away into a lead, then dashes to the wire and wins pulled up. He wins in 2:09 quite as easily as he does in 2:06. He wears a light harness and a strap and the only hold he has on a leg paraphernalia is small quarter boots behind. He performs on a level and dashes away from the wire with speed enough to take the heart from the strongest.

William has won twenty straight heats, eight of which were raced this season. In 1913 he won six races.

WON THREE-YEAR-OLD TITLE.

His record as a three-year-old follows:

At Terre Haute, won three-year-old pace on half-mile track in 2:12¼ and 2:11¾.

At Decatur, Ill., won three-year-old pace, mile track, in 2:07¼ and 2:07¼.

At Peoria, Ill., won championship pace on a mile track in 2:05¼ and 2:03, the second mile giving him the world's record for a three-year-old.

At Galesburg, Ill., won colt pace in 2:12¾ and 2:09¼.

At Urbana, Ill., won three-year-old pace, on half-mile track, in 2:17¼ and 2:13¾. The second mile being a new world's record for a three-year-old on a half-mile track.

At Springfield, Ill., won three-year-old pace in 2:07¾ and 2:08.

William made his Grand Circuit debut at North Randall this season, winning the 2:05 pace from a field of good performers in 2:07¼, lowering a new world's record for a four-year-old pacer.

On Tuesday of last week he repeated his victory in the Blue Ribbon race at Detroit, giving him the world's record for a three-year-old.

LOWERED RECORD.

The real test of the colt came at Grand Rapids when he defeated Dr. Strong and Walter Cochato. He did it easily, in straight heats, averaging 2:01 a heat and lowered his record to 2:06.

William is a bay horse, by Abe J., dam Lizzie C., 2:20. The marvelous young pacer was bred by A. E. Van Ness, of Otterbein, Ind. When he was a year old he was sold for $1,000 cash to W. W. Martin of Lafayette, Ind., together with a stallion interest in his future. William is above the average size. According to the owner, Williams, full of speed, sweeping stroke, directly forward, with no tendency to go outward. The harness most perfectly adopted for extreme speed of that of any pacer now upon the turf.

The great Dan Patch was brought out by E. A. Messner in 1904. He was raced on Indiana tracks. In 1905 Dan Patch proved the sensation of all ages, sweeping down the grand circuit without losing a single race. He closed himself out of the turf by winning game that year, and in this season an exhibition. Dan Patch has never sold him to M. E. Sturgis for a consideration of $60,000. Later he was sold to M. W. Savage, owner of the International Stock farm, Minneapolis, Minn., where he is now a pacer, still located. Dan Patch took his 1:55¼ record in 1906, driven by Wind shield. So far Dan Patch has raced 56 pacers and 17 trotters. His fastest performance is Junior Dan Patch, 2:05¾.

Fed Money Pays Debts.

OVER THE PLATE

By NICK FLATLEY

THE mad rush of the Braves certainly has the Giants on the anxious seat if reports from the Big Town are to be believed. Here's what Trumbull in the New York World has to say on the subject:

"When the Braves are mentioned in their hearing nowadays, the Giants do not laugh with their old-time vigor. In fact, if the door were closed we very much doubt whether you could hear their debonair and chirping giggles more than a block away. Surely, but slowly, those Braves are closing the gap, and the thumping of their brogans on the backward trail is becoming audible."

* * *

OUR old friend, A. Rankin Johnson, broke into the spotlight with the Chiefs Saturday by winning his first game without any great difficulty. But then it may be remembered that Rankin also was some performer when he started to work for the Red Sox. From what he showed here, he lacked a whole lot of staying power. That's what the Nap owners think, too. He didn't stay long with the tail-enders.

* * *

BILL MARTIN, the crack Georgetown shortstop, who is now a member of the Brave squad, is one of the most natural ball players that ever lived, according to Scout Tommy McCarthy of the Stallings outfit. The youngster is a fighter, too. They tell of him that while playing amateur ball down in Washington this Spring against the Baltimore Elks he put the ball on the aggressive Otto Knabe so hard that the latter hit the dust. And when the former Quaker came up and started looking for both, the college chap offered to accommodate him so willingly that Otto very quickly changed his mind.

* * *

IF the Braves persist in pulling off those hair-raising finishes row of ambulances will be a daily necessity without the South End or Back Bay Park, as the case may be. Boston fans can stand a whole lot of excitement, but too much is plenty. Wonder is that a few have not already succumbed to heart failure.

* * *

WILSON COLLINS, who was with the local National team early in the season and let out to Binghamton in the New York State League, is on his way back to join the big league. Not on account of his startling work in the bush circuit, though. Binghamton started to cut expenses and wished the youngster, who was sent out on an optional agreement, onto the Braves again.

* * *

THE best base runner in the country, according to Manager Stallings, is young Dugey, who has been filling in here there and everywhere of late.

"You can say all you wish about Cobb, Milan, Bescher or any of the others," says Georgy, "but I'll trail along with Dugey. He's a regular flash. And when his wrist recovers, Boston will have a chance to see that the snap is some infielder."

* * *

THE return of Joe Wood to the working ranks of the Red Sox is the one thing that may bolster the team into the right spirit to keep on fighting after the Athletics. While the gap between is so long as to be almost impossible of closing, there's a chance. No telling what's likely to happen. A month ago another team we have watched here-about-s two fifteen minutes in the hole and a tail-ender. Today it is the most dangerous sort of contender.

YOUNG Everett Scott lately seems to have started to hit in the fashion that his form early in the year promised. Likewise he continues to be a bear in the field. Not a bit of doubt he is the best infielder brought out in the big leagues this season. And he's getting better all the time. He sure has filled in the big hole left when Heinie Wagner's arm went out. Regarding Wag, who has been working out daily at Fenway Park, the wing is coming back in surprising fashion the past week.

THE LAST STRAW.

From Manheim, loviest village of the plain,
Come things fraught with bitterness and pain,
For war has walloped Manheim on the eye
And left it crying out for peace in vain.

A flock of high-browed men to Manheim went;
To play the game of chess was their intent.
But war with all its horrors came along
And put the kibosh on their tournament.

War leaves but death and famine in its track;
Its trail is marked by ruins burned and black,
But when it puts a chess match on the blink
It leaves the wide world flat upon its back.

Freddie Welsh will not land any knockouts of fame to-day, but he is well qualified to conduct a masterly retreat.

THE BOOTMAKER.

Red Corriden was figuring the cost of livelihood.

"'Tis plain," he said, "I do not get the money that I should.
According to my figuring I'd be a millionaire
If I could sell the boots I make for thirty cent a pair."

An unknown miscreant has stolen Jimmy Archer's watch, but we'll bet the unknown miscreant couldn't steal a base on him.

Stealing on the Cub catchers has become a habit, but not in the baseball yard.

Persons in Toronto want to buy the Kansas City Federal League franchise, but do they realize that the team goes with the franchise?

CHIEF JOHNSON.

He threw the sporting page away
And cursed the writers all,
"I have not been enjoined today;
I wonder what's the matter?"

The Judge who is handling Chief Johnson's case is on a vacation, but he hasn't anything on the Chief.

Speaking of vacations, Joe Benz's team has been on one all season.

NOTHING DOING.

Oh, baseball scribes, were you to strike
"It would be a wicked, wicked crime,
But tell us, for the love of Mike,
Why don't you strike in Wintertime?

The Baseball Writers' Association has a grudge against Frankie Mack, but it is nothing to the grudge that John McGraw harbors in his manly bosom.

We have no doubt that Cy Williams will make a successful first baseman. He can't put one foot on the bag and catch Texas leaguers behind second base.

It is hard to understand one phase of the game in baseball park. Ty Cobb wasn't mixed up in it.

And hand a wallop
While here in free America

Chief Johnson will not be allowed to play until September 1. It is a blow to the Federal League, but the Chief thrives on that kind of punishment.

There are no casualties in a baseball war, but it is said that some of the bargaining got half shot.

TOM M'CAREY TO PICK CHAMPION LIGHTWEIGHT

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 10.—Tom McCarey, the famous fight promoter, is going to try and solve the light-weight title in this country by offering a belt on which will be inscribed "Lightweight Champion of America."

McCarey is following the precedent established by England, where a home champion always bears with him a Lonsdale belt, presented by the lord of that name. In addition to imitating the belt system, McCarey is in communication with other fight promoters in this country, and asking their support in recognizing the American champion as well as a holder of a world's title.

Part of the idea is to compel any fighter that claims the title of right to meet the American wearer of the same weight ground and thereby establish a clear claim to the championship. Over in England they don't consider one a world's champion unless he has beaten their champion. This was evident in the case of Willie Ritchie, who was only recognized on the other side as the American champion, with Welsh upholding the English laurels.

Even if the American champion is opposed by a foreigner he will still retain his title, home. This will, it is expected, boost interest in the sport and encourage ambitious rivals who have no chance of meeting a world's champion, but under this system will have opportunities to get a whack at the Yankee diadem.

Ritchie still claims the American championship, and under McCarey's plan will lose that little jewel if he is beaten by a home-bred lad in a fight to a decision.

There are plenty of clever, sturdy lightweights in the country that can be figured upon to give Ritchie a battle. With a field composed of Johnny Dundee, Charley White, Leach Cross, Jack Britton and other lesser lightweights great interest could be developed through a scheme of this order.

Between Rounds

By RINGSIDE.

WILLIE RITCHIE ISN'T AS DISCONSOLATE over the loss of his title as he was when he first dropped the belt. He has signed to box Ad Wolgast battle many moons ago in exchange for the old scrap that he will stage in Los Angeles.

WILLIE IS COMPLETING PLANS TO SET about this Fall and Winter to find out for himself just how good he is. The match probably will be matched with Charley White, who has been showing up in fine fettle and was also up against Wolgast, Murphy and Leach Cross.

WILLIE BRECHER, THE NEW YORK lightweight, has signed with Los Angeles, and will receive $1,000 a month. Brecher is matched to box Jack Britton at Dreamland Rink, Brooklyn, with Johnny Dundee, Jimmy Kelly and others slated for the week's card. Brecher is an $2,500 boy to Promoter Tom McCarey.

JOHN BRISBER, MANAGER OF BRECHER, has informed Tom McCarey that he will "cash out" of three proposed matches with Brecher in the East, but insists that the latter will have to fight Brecher on the Coast or admit he is afraid of Willie.

EFFORTS ARE BEING MADE TO BRING Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion, to Boston in advance for a ten or fifteen-round match. Kilbane is now in Cleveland, O., and is matched in the twenty-round championship contest with Pal Moore at Vernon, Cal. Kilbane is now being held up because of Kilbane's terms, amounting to $5,000 and a guarantee that he would be matched with Leach Cross, Jack Britton and other lesser lightweights great interest could be developed through a scheme of this order.

THE ROBERT RED SOX ARE TRYING TO get under cover for the last two of the Collins and Leonard trio, but Speaker and Gregg have added two fast ones that are going to help them considerably. And Carrigan is grabbing three recruits from the Texas League, any other team. He feels that he can get along without Ben Egan, who was claimed by the Athletics, but eventually win the pennant. Carrigan is simply looking for a little more insurance for good measure. They are some team, anyway.

MANAGER HERZOG OF THE CINCINnati Reds has purchased Pitcher Ames from Portland, Ore., of the Coast League. Ames pitches a left hander with reputed to be the fastest ball in the league. He is also credited with an excellent curve ball. Ames is a big fellow, standing 6 feet 2 inches and weighing 200 pounds. He has had a fine season, winning 20 games and losing 10. This is the Notre Dame boy who was claimed by the Giants last year but was assigned to the Coast.

COBB AND CRAWFORD GET MORE HITS per each inning per a majority of the fans would have you believe. Cobb has a batting average of .420 and Baker is asked to name the best hitting combination in the league.

THESE ARE THE DAYS FOR THE BALL players, and it is interesting to note that the Cubs have used a total of eighteen pitchers in 23 games, which is an average of two-thirds of a pitcher per game. Of the eighteen pitchers used by the Cubs, seven have been recruited from the Feds or their welcome into organized ball.

JACK BARRY NEVER FIELDED BETTER than he has this year, but batting has been the bugbear of his career. The alumni is getting his share of the hits, however, and Barry has been left-handed pitchers as they have ever been in the season.

PRESIDENT MORRIS OF THE TRENTON club of the Tri-State league, which is one of the strongest, is going enough for the makers of baseball, but only a brilliant performance on the field will help him to shunning the last one of the week.

HARRY WORTER, THE FORMER RED Sox hurler, fourth to base running and third baseman of the Pacific Coast League, Scouts are looking him over for another trial in the majors.

STALLINGS' BRAVES BATTLE TO GO INTO SECOND PLACE IN LEAGUE STANDING TODAY

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

RED SOX AND TIGERS CLASH IN FINAL GAME OF SERIES AT DETROIT THIS AFTERNOON

BRAVES MAY GO INTO SECOND PLACE TODAY

By NICK FLATLEY.

Great chance today for furious finishers—the Braves—to rocket into second place. If they can take another from the Reds, and the Cubs and Cards oblige by losing, that's where they'll be. Not by any great margin, of course, but there, just the same.

The three things upon which the advance depends are almost certain to transpire, as matters are moving now.

As a starter, the Braves are very likely to win. Bill James is due to pitch.

To continue, the Cards are liable to lose. They're playing the Giants and Matty is due to oppose them.

Finally, the Cubs will likely lose. That's about all they've been doing lately. They're in the middle of a [illegible] bad slump.

There you have it. The tailenders of last month today may perch proudly in second place. The figures, if all we ask happens, will be:

	W.	L.	P.C.
Braves	54	46	.539
Cubs	53	48	.525
Cards	54	49	.524

By the way they've been playing for a month, we all know the Braves should be at the head of the list. But they started off so wretchedly that it's a long, hard fight, but getting easier all the time.

Stallings' stars keep right on improving as the situation grows tense. The others, however, are beginning to show some signs of strain. In a month the Braves have won twice as many as any of the three teams now leading them. Each week they keep right on getting nearer and nearer the worried Giants.

Last week the Braves won five of the six games they played. The leading Giants took four and dropped three; the Cardinals won and lost three, while the faltering Cubs were beaten five times in a half dozen contests.

Just six and a half games behind the front, the same sensational sort of cavorting will accomplish what would have been attempted impossible a short time back.

OUT FOR FIRST PLACE.

This promises to be a history making week for the Boston hopes. Three games with Reds, just now playing mighty scrappy ball, will be followed by the big crash over in New York. Here Braves and Giants have their death grapple the three later days of the week.

If the Braves can go over to New York and take two out of three, or perhaps three straights, it's dollars to pennies that before they get home from a sail around the West, which follows, they'll be in first place.

The Giant pitchers, Matty excepted, nowadays aren't going any too well, and a determined bid by the Braves is likely to set the little team on the toboggan. Further, while the Reds are being entertained hereabouts, the Cards will be continuing to swap punches with McGraw and company.

With the exception of the Braves, the Cardinals had the best record of any National League team for the month of July. Though they dropped four straights to the Walpole street firebrands, they looked like a much better team than do the Reds. Yet the latter sailed into the Giants and collected four out of five a week or so ago.

While it would be folly to discount the energy at present on our hands, the pitching strength of the Braves augurs very well for the series. Bill James had had a longer rest than has been his lot for many moons. Save to fill in very acceptably as a pinch hitter in Saturday's wild finale, the lanky individual has warmed the bench ever since last Wednesday.

He can work today and then take a good long vacation—for him—until one of the New York battles.

GEORGE TYLER TOMORROW.

Lefty Tyler will be right in line tomorrow, as his last appearance was Thursday, when he worked but five innings, for the final Red game Wednesday any one of the youngsters will be ripe, provided Rudolph is saved to open against the Giants.

From what he has shown in the couple of games he has entered of late, Paul Strand is about due to start a game. Working him in the final with Herzog's hopefuls, would leave Rudolph, James and Tyler, a somewhat worthy trio, if seven other teams in the league are to be believed, well rested for the New York debacle.

Which we are inclined to believe is not coming Muggsy McGraw and other members of the champion board of strategy any undue pleasure these warlike times.

Captain Johnny Evers is sure to be with the team in a day or two, probably sooner. At all events, he will be on hand for the New York series. With Johnny out of the lineup the team is weakened 50 per cent. His pep and gameness is communicated wholesale.

Not that there isn't plenty of fight in the outfit without him. That there was proved very completely out there in Fenway Saturday. But there's more when the league's greatest second baseman is on the job. The more the merrier, for us.

Athletics Should Play Old Baseball

Clark Griffith says that the Athletics make a mistake in trying anything but straight baseball, that they can hit so well and run so fast that they drive opposing teams wild. It is almost impossible to double Oldring, Collins, Murphy, Strunk and Baker, while Barry and McInnis are very fast men. Then they can all hit. Griff contends that they are not adapted to "inside" or smart ball and make a mistake in trying to play it. Put them three or four runs to the bad in the seventh inning and they are more dangerous than when playing "inside" ball for one run, is the way Griffith sizes them up. He may be right.

Crabtree's Racers Draw His Hearse

TAYLORVILLE, Aug. 10. — The fastest pacing team in the world—Hedgewood Boy and Lady Maude C.—drew the hearse that bore the body of John G. Crabtree to the cemetery. This was in accordance with the dying request of Mr. Crabtree, who owned the team.

DUTCH LEONARD TO FACE TIGERS IN FINAL TODAY

DETROIT, Aug. 10.—The Boston Red Sox wind up their Western trip this afternoon against the Tigers and will leave for Boston immediately after the game. The Boston boys are out to win this last game and it is probable that Dutch Leonard will be sent to the mound against the Tigers by Manager Bill Carrigan.

Leonard has pitched wonderful ball against the Tigers this year, and in his last thirteen innings he has not allowed the local players a hit. On Saturday and again yesterday he went in during the last few innings and held the Tigers hitless.

The Red Sox won the third game of the series yesterday by a grand seventh-inning rally that netted the Speed Boys five large runs, the final score reading 8 to 6.

Shore was knocked out of the box in the third, and Foster, who succeeded him, was so wild that he was constantly in trouble, two more runs being added while he toiled. In the seventh, after Boston went ahead, Carrigan put in Leonard, who did not allow a hit, thus making thirteen consecutive innings in which he has blanked the Jennings men. He finished the game by slipping over a perfect third strike on Ty Cobb.

Boston won out in the seventh inning when Reig went to bit for Cady at the start of the seventh and did just that, his single landing out in deep left. Henriksen fanned for Foster. After sending a couple of curves into the adjacent lot, Hooper caught one that he liked and banged it Cobb-ward. The pill seeped through Ty and Harry went home, Reig having scored ahead of him. Scott walked and Speaker did the same, which terminated Main's portion of the entertainment.

Covelesky introduced himself to Lewis by bounding the ball off the unoffending cranium of Janvrin's baby sucks. Gardner rolled to Heilmann and Scott scored while Lewis was being forced. McKee tried to jump Speaker slumbering off third, but only succeeded in making a bad omen that let Tris score and Gardner went to third. Moriarity failed to make a difficult playing of Janvrin's bust and Gardner also cashed.

Fraternity Expands.

TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 10.—The ball players' fraternity is to be extended to the Western and Southern Leagues, according to David Fultz, president of the organization here today. Fultz met a number of players of the Sioux City and Topeka teams of the Western League, but no announcement was made that any of the players had joined the fraternity. Fult intended to go to Wichita today.

War May Postpone Cup Races Till 1915

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The Royal Ulster Yacht Club in a communication with the New York Yacht Club stated that if the present war continued they would be glad to have the races between the Shamrock IV. and the American defender sailed in 1915.

FOUR SPRINT CHAMPIONS IN BIG BATTLE

Frank Kramer, Walter Rutt, Jackie Clarke and Alfred Goullet, four sprint champions, comprising the great quartet of bicyclists ever brought together on one track, will meet at the Revere Cycle track tomorrow night.

Taking it from any angle this collection of talent is unbeatable and should furnish some of the best short distance racing ever witnessed at the beach oval.

Rutt is sprint champion of the world, Kramer is champion of America, a title which he has held for thirteen years, while Clarke and Goullet are the leaders of the Australasian contingent. In short every one of these men is a bona fide titlist and collectively they form the cream of the bike world.

Tomorrow night's race may be Rutt's last one in this country for some time. Rutt is a lieutenant in a reserve regiment of motorcyclists in the German army and is expecting to be called to the defense of his country at any moment. It has always been his ambition to take the measure of Kramer, Clarke and Goullet in the same race and tomorrow night he will make a hard effort to do so.

In his only appearance at Revere this season Rutt was defeated by Goullet after three thrilling heats. Goullet was in turn beaten by Kramer. Tomorrow night will mark Clarke's first appearance at the beach this summer.

Another feature of tomorrow night's program will be a twenty-mile motor paced race between Norman Hansen, the crack Dane, Menus Bedell and Vincent Madonna. There will also be the usual card of professional and amateur events.

Tom Is Troubled When He Fails to Get a Letter from Edith in the Morning.

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER.

CHAPTER XXII.

"'TS all de mail what came, suh."

Washington, Tom Morton's nineteen-year-old colored boy-of-all-work, said the words regretfully as he laid sundry uninteresting-looking envelopes beside his master's plate at the breakfast table. Tom spoke with an indifference which he was far from feeling.

"That's all right, Wash. Bring in my coffee, please."

The colored boy shook his head regretfully as he went into the tiny kitchen and poured out the steaming beverage. "I'm right sartain," he mused, "dat Mr. Morton ain't been goin' out to dat Honeywood place so much all dese weeks fer de good ob his health. An' I sure did 'spect dat dere would be a letter in a lady's han'-writin' fer him dis mornin', I'm mighty sorry dere ain't!"

When alone Washington allowed himself liberty of thought and whispered mutterings in the dialect of his race. When, however, he spoke to a white person he aped the bearing and language of his master in a way that brought a smile to the lips of that master's friends. The negro is a marvellous mimic and copies the manners of a beloved employer with an ease and enjoyment that are amusing.

This lad was genuinely found of Tom Morton and served him faithfully. He had an easy berth, and he knew it. He likewise relished with great rejoicing in the cast-off ties and clothing that reverted to him. His only criticism of "Mr. Mo'ton's taste" was that his neckties and vests were "too quiet-colored."

This morning he was much concerned over the fact that his master seemed more thoughtful than usual, and had even forgotten to comment on the excellency of the omelet, which was a golden puff to the eyes and delectable to the palate. Was it business or love that was interfering with the employer's appetite? he wondered. At last he summoned courage to express his solicitude.

"Seems me, suh," he said, respectfully, as Tom folded his napkin and arose from his chair, "but I hope you are not feelin' poorly this mornin'. You don't seem to have no appetite, suh."

SMILED KINDLY

Tom smiled kindly. "I am feeling perfectly well, thank you, Wash," he assured his attendant. "But I had a tiresome journey yesterday and I did not sleep until late last night—so perhaps I am not quite as hungry as usual. A brisk walk will set me up all right."

"Are you dinin' at home this evening, suh?" asked the servant.

Morton hesitated. He long to be able to say that he would not be at home, for that would mean that Edith summoned him to Homewood.

"No—yes—that is—I don't know yet," he replied vaguely. "Much depends on what mail I find at my office. I'll phone you later in the day and tell you."

"Yes, suh."

"And, Wash, if any message comes for me, be sure to call me up and deliver it just as you receive it. Understand?"

"Yes, suh. Good mornin', suh."

The sunshine of yesterday had given way to a raw mist that made Tom shiver slightly as he reached the street. It was just the kind of weather to tempt one to take the brisk walk of which he had just spoken, and he pretended that this was the reason that he turned his steps immediately toward the subway station.

In reality he knew that he was hurrying down to his office in the hope that there he might find some communication from Edith. Perhaps she had written, addressing him there instead of at his apartment. Yet—she had never done that before.

He tried to read his newspaper on the train, holding the sheet in one hand and hanging on to the strap with the other, swaying backward and forward with scores of other men all going forth with the same aim at heart or in mind—that of making a living for themselves or for those dependent upon them.

It is a mighty army—this that throngs subway, elevated and surface cars morning and evening. We are so accustomed to seeing it that we are not as much interested in its personnel as in its soldiers who march in a holiday parade. But many of these unremarkable civilians are as valiant heroes as those who wear a national uniform, while the women who are crowded into conveyances with them may be as brave and self-sacrificing as the Florence Nightingales and Clara Bartons of the world.

The greatest fights for life, the greatest victories of the spirit, are not always fought and won on famous battlefields.

DISAPPOINTED

Tom Morton thought of this today as he found himself unable to fix his attention upon the paper he hid. Looking about him he wondered if in each of the lives of these people was some tender longing, some anxiety as great as his. Then he chided himself for comparing his comparatively comfortable life with the life of the poor man across the aisle from him, with face hard and cynical, clothes thin and worn.

Come to think of it, Tom reflected, the only real trouble that he himself had this morning was that he had not heard from the woman he loved. But he would hear from her when he reached the office.

Yet here, again, he was doomed to disappointment. Only business communications awaited him. When he had looked over these he felt that he could stand this suspense no longer. Perhaps Edith was ill. Perhaps she had not received his telegram. Yet surely some one would have let him know!

A happy thought struck him. He would telephone to Ralph's office. To be sure, Ralph was absent from his office as often that Tom wondered why he troubled his brother to pay the rent of the place. Yet it "looked better" that men should say, "Drop a lower to have some business address."

The boy who served as office boy and clerk answered Tom when he "rang up" Ralph's office. No, the boy said, Mr. Morton had not been to the office for several days now—indeed, for almost a week. There was, therefore, no information to be gained from that quarter.

RESPITE

By CONSTANCE CLARKE

My little workroom is so still
It wears a garb of rest;
Gone the busy little thrill
That marked it at its best
When, many missions to fulfil,
It teemed with thoughts expressed.

The yellow fingers of the sun
That used to pry their way
Over my papers, one by one,
Like golden dreams astray,
Are barred out, for my work is done—
The blinds are closed today.

The quiet of my little room
Maddens my restless brain,
Chafing to pierce the sombre gloom,
To greet the world again;
Grudging the ceaseless measured boom
That marks time spent with pain.

Do You Know That—

The annual marriage fair, at which eligible young men are the guests of unattached spinsters desirous of matrimony was held at Beaussines, in Belgium, a few Sundays ago, when sixty-seven youths were entertained by as many maidens at an al fresco banquet.

Perhaps the greatest feat of microscopic engraving was accomplished by a farmer in Alberta, who prepared a card of welcome to the Duke of Connaught inscribed in Hebrew on a grain of wheat which contained no fewer than 360 letters. So fine was the lettering that a microscope was necessary to read the inscription with any ease.

The inhabitants of Charlesworth, near Glossop, England, are enjoying the curious experience of listening to a stammering cuckoo. At first it was thought it had not found its note, but time has gone on, and, undoubtedly, it is the bird's natural note.

The water in an old, disused tin mine at Ponsanooth, Cornwall, has been discovered to possess strong radio-active properties, and bottles of it have been sold at $17.50 apiece.

The Queen of England's chief dresser, who is responsible for the packing of Her Majesty's dresses on her many court moves, has a list of certain personal and specially treasured belongings which always go with the dresses from one palace to another. Among these treasures are a Bible and a shawl, both wedding presents from the late Mrs. Gladstone. Altogether there are some nothing-odd-like in the bunch, including ten photographs of different members of the royal family.

A Plymouth, England, dealer named Turner, who bought for $1,250 the hull and cargo of the Swedish steamer Jane Rowe, which went ashore near Plymouth in February, looks like making a fortune out of the purchase. The ship had on board 3,000 tons of iron ore. Assay has shown this ore to be heavily veined with copper, which makes its value about $30 a ton. Forty men are now working to transfer the cargo to a lighter.

Birds of a Feather

NO. 2—THE MOTHER-BIRD

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service

By NELL BRINKLEY

THE bravest, the stillest, the greatest-deeded, the smallest-voiced and the biggest-hearted bird in all the great wood of the world is the mother bird. Her song is a love call softened to a lullaby. Her spirit is unselfishness at its whitest heat. Frost, fire and crystal are cold and sullied beside it. And no matter how vain a little heart she may have had, how brilliant the feathers on her prideful little chest, out of her eyes has gone all dreaming of tinsel and under the forgotten splendor of her coloring she dares to build whole lives.—NELL BRINKLEY.

The Debutante Slouch

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

A PARTY of young people were discussing the "debutante slouch" and one young man declared that it gave to some girls an air of distinction and enhanced their beauty tenfold. On his being questioned whether these same young women would lose their charm if they walked upright, with hands and chests up, he promptly responded that they would; that the "slouch" was in great measure responsible for their attractiveness.

Almost all present agreed that the new mode of walking gave to those fortunate "who could get away with it" an irresistible charm.

Won't you favor us with a little talk on the subject soon?

HOME GIRL."

Right earnestly I put myself on record as heartily against the silly distortion of the human body called the "debutante slouch."

The word "slouch" is no weaker, no homelier than the absurd posture it names.

Ever since man learned to walk upright there have been fads in the method of carrying his body. The workers of this generation will remember the "Grecian bend" of many years ago. It was followed by a reaction in the feminine mincing known as the "golf stride." This was perhaps the most hideous motion womankind ever evolved. But the "slouch" of today combines all the awkwardness of the "stride" with all the unhealthfulness of the "bend."

There is nothing to be said for the "slouch" from the point of view of health, grace and charm. It distorts the bodies and the God gave us. It cramps the lungs through which we are permitted to draw in an invigorating supply of fresh air. It makes us look like caricatures of humanity, and it is conspicuous, absurd, unnatural and lacking in the proud, free poise youth and health ought to take.

WHAT THE SAGE SAID

"Carry your chin in, and the crown of the head high—we are gods in the chrysalis," wrote a sage. There is nothing god-like in the "slouch."

Carry your head high and your chest must expand to take in pure air and breathe out health and vitality.

AND HEALTH AND VITALITY ARE THE MOST CHARMING, THE MOST MAGNETIC THINGS IN ALL THE WORLD. THE PRESENT FANCY FOR A POSTURE THAT SUGGESTS ILL-HEALTH AND THAT WILL ACTUALLY CAUSE WEAKENED LUNGS AND ANAEMIA IS ONLY A MORBID FAD.

The "slouch" is never responsible for the attractiveness of any girl. Of course, a brisk, masculine stride will rob a girl of the sweet helplessness of manner that appeals to many men. But between an awkward "golf stride" that seems to be trying to repeat the saintly miracle of leaving a foot-print in solid rock, and the anaemic weakness of the "slouch" there is a vast chasm.

The "slouch" can never be better than quaintly ugly even when "sweet and twenty" practices it to the accompaniment of shyly challenging eyes and the tantalizing revelation of immodestly clinging garments. But what is the attainment of ugliness at twenty will be the utter ugliness of worn-out and unfashionable qualities at forty!

The "slouch" will lead to a flat-chested, angular middle age, with no grace at all, and to an uncouth old age in which all the curves of a feminine figure will be where they do not belong. The "slouch" of today will some day surely turn the figure into a caricature of bowed back and protruding abdomen.

Girls think that men like them best if they are modern and "up-to-date."

But when a man goes on record as an admirer of a morbid, unhealthy and abnormal posture like the "slouch," I doubt his own evidence against his sense and good taste.

Men never know what they really like in women and they never, never will. If they could the spell of charm would be broken.

The moment a man truly understands what makes him in love with a girl, the knell of her power is sounded.

Men say they admire this and they dislike that in girls. They think they know! And the fact that they like or dislike exactly opposite things in different girls doesn't in the least enlighten them!

THE RESULT.

The "slouch" is a posture of utter feebleness and suggests the weakened lungs and digestion it is sure to cause. So it cannot give any girl "an air of distinction" or "irresistible charm."

Perhaps a girl who is beautiful and charming may triumph over this silly carriage that suggests her physical inability to manage her body healthily and well. But the man who admires this posture when he sees it in passing would never choose as a companion a girl whose weak lungs did not permit her to join him in walking or swimming all through the glorious Summer time. And no man wants a wife who is a morbid invalid.

Vitality is charm. If life grls who seem charming when they slouch along with sunken chests and heads protruding like those of startled turtles were suddenly to spring into life and fairly float along "with fairy feet that scarcely brushed the dew" and starry eyes and all the flushing pink-cheeked glow of expanded lungs they would exchange furtive allurement for worship and devoted admiration.

Don't cultivate the "debutante slouch." It will make you look like the anaemic mushroom grown in the dark. Be a goddess in the chrysalis who brings life and light and bursting vitality and magnetic charm wherever she goes.

But Possibly True

Some people have a terrifying knack of saying the wrong thing at the wrong time. Inconvenient time. Fred was one of them.

The other night at a dinner party the talk turned to the horrors of war, having been ingeniously turned that way by Lieutenant Pillwell.

"Yes," he said, "war is a terrible business." This kind of thing always seems impressive, and a fluffy body looked at the lieutenant in admiration. Then he trotted out another old saw.

"No painter would dare to paint a picture of a battlefield as it really is!" he said, trying to look like one who could horrify the world if he only chose to speak.

This was where Fred woke up.

"Go—tell me," he said. "Did you ever kill anyone yourself during the war?"

Later his hostess, with a distant air, informed Fred that Lieutenant Pillwell had served in the Medical Corps!

Rather Difficult

"Well, old man," called out the bachelor friend as he hastened toward the station, "and how's the family?"

The much-married man laid a restraining hand upon his shoulder. "My children," he said, "are at a very difficult age now."

"Difficult?" inquired his friend. "But they're all past the measles and the teething age, aren't they?"

"Yes, long ago. But, my fellow, you don't know what a father's troubles are. My children are at the age when, if I use slang, my wife says I'm setting a bad example, and, if I speak correctly, the youngsters think I am a back number. Now, which would you do?"

Very Realistic

"Were you at the chauffeur's dinner?"

"Yes; and to make it look more table laid to look like a motor car."

"Really?"

"Yes; and to make it look more realistic, a lot of chauffeurs were under the table before the evening was over."

A New Terror of the African Wilds

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

HE name is HYLOCHOERUS MEINERTZHAGENI, which, like his tusks, can only be expressed in capitals. He looks like an elephant, and he is, in his African forest wilds.

Silence has only found him out in recent years. There had been strange rumors about some monstrous and malevolent animal haunting the dim recesses of the great equatorial forest, but it was not until 1904 that Captain R. Meinertzhagen encountered the terrible "giant hog" in the tangled woods and proved the superiority of the rifle to Lo Langolo.

Almost every reader has some time been thrilled with stories of boar hunts, which are still popular in some parts of Europe, and are not without danger, on account of the strength, fleetness and celerity of those animals, but the European boar is a tame and weak creature in comparison with this Brobdingnagian hog of Africa.

His scimitar-shaped upper tusks are nearly eleven inches long and six in girth.

The muscular strength of the beast is so great that he can slay a man with a single slash. The natives say that these fierce creatures often attack human beings without provocation, and the women who have to go into the thickets to gather wood stand in great terror of them.

The giant hog is covered with a thick coat of long, wiry hair of a jet black color and is said to be, in every way inconceivably ugly. The head of his snout consists of a broad flat disk, and under his eyes there grow huge, wart-like excrescences, which add to his repulsiveness. As he often haunts swampy thickets, he must sometimes be mistaken at a hasty view for a young rhinoceros. The hog appears to be intermediate in structure between the bush pig and the wart hog. The latter has equally long, or even longer, tusks, but is comparatively mild-mannered, while the Hylochoerus charges upon the slightest provocation and is armed with the reckless zest of a born fighter.

Perhaps He Might

Jones suffered from—among other things—a weak heart, a weak liver and a weak digestion. In fact, he was one of those people who always have, or think they have, something serious the matter with them.

Recently he went down to stay with a friend at the seaside in the hope of obtaining relief from one of his more chronic ailments.

A few days after his arrival he was walking along the beach with his host when suddenly he remarked:

"I drank a glassful of salt water yesterday, fresh from the sea, and, d'you know, I really think I arrived relief from it. I wonder," he added, "do you think I might take a second glass?"

His host hesitated for a while. Then:

"Yes," he said, "I think you might. I don't think it will be missed."

ANY time the skin is punctured or broken it makes an opening for poison to get in. For safety's sake use Dioxogen. It is the one pure peroxide of hydrogen. STOCKS AND SHIPS STILL EMBARGOED

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks and ships are still under embargo and it is not likely to be lifted from the former until it is from the latter. Exporters are awaiting safe seas and arrangements to lay them for cereals and manufactures sent to Europe. When assurances become safe international exchange will also be re-established in a monetary sense. This will inure payment for shipments. There was no change in either for the week ended Saturday or even Sunday. The fact that the war will be a protracted affair is interesting. If it continues long domestic trade will adjust itself to European needs and conditions and there will at least set in some of the influences favorable to stocks and other goods. But it will be a slow process, perhaps before foreign trade in many lines will be resumed.

EUROPEAN TRADE FIGURES.

During the first year which ended with June last the foreign trade of the United States, including exports and imports, totalled around $4,000,000,000, an increase of about $750,000,000 over the total of the previous twelve months. In the 1914 total our exports to the United Kingdom totalled $587,150,000; those to Germany $233,484,000; to France $169,000,000; to the Netherlands, $120,000,000; to Belgium $66,845,000, and to Austria-Hungary $25,000,000. These figures indicate how much war and embargo on shipping is reducing trade in this country.

PLENTY OF MEAT ON HAND.

As regards the advance in the price of foodstuffs in this country, while a foreign war has caused supplies to accumulate, it is interesting to learn that Chicago packers, who are not shipping to Europe at present, have in storage 56,567,821 pounds of meat, including 34,814 barrels of mess pork, 49,720 barrels of other pork, 12,254,441 pounds of short rib sides, and 4,156,-887 pounds of extra clear sides. Their lard supplies of all kinds total 221,464 tierces. The stock of canned goods in this country is very large.

UNFILLED STEEL TONNAGE.

The United States Steel corporation today reported that its unfilled orders on July 31 last showed an increase of 125,732 tons, compared with the total at the end of July last. Unfilled orders on July 31, 1914, totalled 4,158,589 tons, compared with 4,032,-857 at the end of June this year and 5,889,356 at the end of July, 1913.

WHEAT TOUCHED NEW HIGH.

May wheat touched a new high price for the season at the Chicago Board of Trade today, selling at 111¾, a jump of more than 7 cents since Thursday last. The previous record was made on Saturday last, when the grain for that month rose to 107⅝. Advances of nearly 5 cents were attained today by September and December wheat. Sentiment in "the pit" was radically bullish.

FOREIGNERS BUYING BONDS.

While the reopening of stock markets is likely to be delayed by fear of liquidation by foreigners of American securities, it is reported that orders from Europeans to buy high-grade listed railroad and other bonds have been received in New York. The orders came from London. It is said that there is considerable demand in this country for stocks around the present level at which they closed on the last market day. But sentiment in banking circles appears to be much opposed to reopening exchanges.

FARMERS HOLDING WHEAT.

It is reported from the West that farmers are withholding their wheat from market, and that this is largely due to the rise in the price of cash wheat. It is estimated that the war will add $100,000,000 to the value of the American crop, despite any deterioration. According to the Department of Agriculture's figures, the composite condition of all crops on August 1 was 2 per cent below the ten-year average, but 2 per cent above the average at that date in 1913. Within six weeks the wholesale price of flour has risen $1.40 a barrel. Although shipments to Europe have ceased temporarily, millers in hard times as much demand for flour in this country as under more favorable conditions.

The accumulating is due to expectation that ocean navigation will soon be resumed and that the foreign demand will be so great as to warrant even higher prices in this country.

MAY RAISE INCOME TAX RATE.

There is talk in Washington that the deficit in government revenue caused by diminution of import receipts will be met by raising the rate of the tax which Americans must pay on incomes. Chairman Underwood of the House Ways and Means Committee says some emergency taxation measure must be passed before Congress adjourns.

It is possible, he said, "that the government to recoup its losses by selling Panama Canal bonds, of which $250,000,000 are unsold, but I do not anticipate this will be done. There are plenty of other ways to increase revenue.

FREIGHT CAR MOVEMENT.

The war in Europe has diverted attention from the conditions in this country, except those having a bearing upon over-sea business. But in the June issue of Bradstreet's the car and world trade was improving. In the United States the indication is that the 1913 figures of the American Railway Association, which was published recently, that on August 1 there were 168,665 surplus of idle cars on the lines in the United States, as against 198,665, compared with 228,241 July 15, a decrease of 29,850. Compared with 1912, August 15, 254,-000, while the gross number in use rose from 1,442 to 2,257, or 815 cars. The weekly net surplus of box cars declined from 8,328 to 2,945 during the end car surplus fell to 1,-preciable decrease, the total on 374 on August 1 comparing with 8,-2,147. Flat car surplus stood at 8,678, against 6,515 on July 15.

Reserve Bank Plan Now in Operation

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Currency reform became a reality today when the new federal reserve system was put into operation. The members of the Federal Reserve Board met at the call of Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and took the oath of office. The designation of Charles S. Hamlin, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, as governor of the board and of Frederick A. Delano of Chicago as vice-governor completed the last preliminary to organization.

She was about five feet nine inches in height and had light brown hair.

The deed has gone to record transferring from William F. Natalie et al. to James W. It is the intention of Mr. Maguire to erect a building to combine activities conected with the handling of the Pierce-Arrow car.

CRAWFORD HOUSE

SCOLLAY SQUARE and BRATTLE STREET.

FUNERAL OF MRS. WILSON HELD TODAY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The simple and tender sympathy which rained a silver thread through her character was a dominant note at the last rites for Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, held in the East Room of the White House today. The service was as she herself desired it, with the ritual following the Presbyterian traditions.

Only her kinsfolk and a chosen few of the closest friends and of the official life of Washington in addition to delegations of Senators and Representatives were present at the services.

Massed with flowers, the bier was placed at the north end of the East Room, and near by the President, his three daughters and the relatives were grouped. With bowed heads they heard a chapter from the Scriptures read beginning: "In my Father's house are many mansions," and prayer pronounced by a pastor who has shared their intimate family joys and sorrows for the past quarter of a century.

Upon the shoulders of the Rev. Sylvester W. Beach, of Princeton, N. J., fell the task of expressing the grief of the nation over the death of the lady of the White House. He was assisted by the Rev. James H. Taylor of the Central Presbyterian Church of Washington, which the Wilson family have attended since coming to the capital.

Tomorrow the body will be laid in its final resting place in Rome, Ga., the childhood home of Mrs. Wilson, next to her father and mother previously laid to rest. She will be buried from the church in which her father was pastor for many years. The funeral train leaves Washington at 4:35 o'clock.

Nearly 200 persons, including the official delegations, were present at the simple service today. The family party included besides the President, Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. McAdoo, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Sayre, Miss Margaret Wilson, Professor and Mrs. Axson, brother of Mrs. Wilson, Joseph H. Wilson, George Howe and Edward Wilson. There was no flowers.

Early hour today the coffin was taken from the death chamber to the East Room, where it was banked with the floral pieces which poured in upon the White House in almost overflowing. The pallbearers were policemen who have served at the White House for many years and whom warm friendship Mrs. Wilson had. There were no honorary bearers.

The nation added a fitting tribute to the memory of Mrs. Wilson. The halls of Congress were silent and all government departments closed at 1 o'clock as a mark of respect to the dead.

In Washington mourns Mrs. Wilson's brief reign in the White House merely as a chapter after a transcontinental trip from Oregon. The funeral had been postponed so that he could be present. The only living sister of Mrs. Wilson, Miss Margaret Elliott, is ill in California and was not able to be present at the services.

Making Small Display Advertisements Pay

A Florist Upon Whom Fortune Smiled

In the city of Chicago there is a florist who grew tired of standing around waiting for business to come to him.

While his roses wilted and lost their bloom, he pondered over the problem. Many plans were presented to him. He discarded many schemes of his own. But when he sifted them to the bottom he found them defective.

No matter which way his mind turned, it encountered advertising, but knowing nothing about advertising, he considered it impossible on account of his preconceived idea regarding the expense.

He finally sought the advice of a small merchant who constantly used the newspapers in a modest way.

"How can I advertise flowers successfully?" he asked.

The small merchant thought a moment and then suggested:

"Why don't you sell—every Saturday—a box of flowers for a dollar? Offer something different each week. Give more flowers for a dollar than any one in Chicago ever heard of and see that they are fresh and attractive."

"I'll do it," declared the florist, as he hurried away to prepare for his first sale.

That was several years ago. Today that once discouraged florist sells more flowers than any other florist in Chicago. Thousands of those dollar boxes find their way into the homes of the "Windy City" each week. Hundreds are shipped to customers in the surrounding territory.

Today that florist is big, but he is growing bigger. He is rich, but he is growing richer. He confines himself to small space and is a firm believer in newspaper advertising.

He not only sells flowers for a dollar a box, but he is recognized as one of the leading florists of the Middle West.

He advertised flowers at a bargain price, but—

He realized that nature does not impose upon God's creatures in the manufacture of flowers.

The violet is as fragrant and beautiful in the dooryard of the peasant as it is in the garden of a king.

By advertising he created a wonderful reputation for selling the best at the lowest prices. Now he is master of his own greenhouses and acres and acres of flower beds and sells direct to the people.

He accomplished all this by advertising—starting in a small way.

Any florist in Boston can do the same thing. There are more than a million people in Boston—most of whom love flowers. The field, therefore, is capable of intensive cultivation.

You can prove this to your entire satisfaction—increase your popularity—swell your profits. You can start in a modest way in the American, and as your business increases you can increase your advertising.

You can distribute your message among more than 400,000 American readers daily, and reach people with a love for the home, for flowers, and the finer things of life.

A truthful talk will attract them.

A test will tell.

The South and Its Cotton, and the War in Europe

In the midst of the general steadiness in economic and business conditions throughout the country, there is a circumstance surrounding the Southern States where menace may be and should be avoided by the wise conduct of its business men, reinforced by the thoughtful co-operation of a practical and intelligent government.

The European war promises to make the West rich. That granary of the Republic has in its grain and foodstuffs the vital need of European nations NOW, if they could be carried across the Atlantic, and certainly in overwhelming demand as soon as the war is over.

The South fronts the greatest cotton and staple crop it has had in years. Recent prices were good, and under normal conditions the Southern farmers would have reaped a harvest of well-earned riches from the product of the year.

The South's yield of cotton is about 14,000,000 bales. Of this production our own country's mills use 6,000,000 bales. Europe takes the other 8,000,000 bales, and of this export Germany and Austria consume 4,000,000 bales, and England and France the other 4,000,000 bales.

Even if it should happen that the English and French demand should not be fatally affected by the war, it is practically certain that Germany and Austria are not likely this Winter to call for their 4,000,000 bales of Southern cotton.

So that the South, within the last few days, has awakened in apprehension to the fact that its kingly staple which has so long been regnant in the markets of the world is in peril of its revenues.

There is said to be in consequence much depression in the great agricultural South, out of which comes fear of a fall from 13c. and 14c. cotton to cotton at 8c. and 6c.—a price far below the level of Southern prosperity.

Something ought to be done strongly and done quickly to encourage and to enable the Southern farmer to carry his cotton over this period of apprehension and doubt. That hero-worker of Southern recuperations should not be allowed to sacrifice his staple at ruinous prices in a period of panic and discouragement.

The AMERICAN, which has always been the friend of the Southern farmer, believes that the strong business men of the South and the National Government ought to get together right away in a vigorous and united effort to save the situation.

A few years ago, when the people of Brazil raised so huge a crop of coffee that the price of the product went down to ruin prices, the Brazilian government raised the money to sustain the standard of prices for the crop, and saved the Brazilian farmer millions of dollars.

This valorization of coffee in Brazil worked well in its results.

The AMERICAN is not ready to advocate the government valorization of cotton in this emergency. But the situation demands judgment and power to keep the South from disaster.

It would cost the South between two and three hundred million dollars to have cotton fall to six or eight cents, and if the brains of its business men and the wise, strong policy of the government can prevent it, this commercial calamity should not fall upon the great section just growing out of disaster into riches.

The Clarion Call of Commerce for Congressional Action

Action! action! should be the watchword and the duty of the American Congress and the American people in this great commercial emergency.

From the powerful entrenchment of the AMERICAN'S business page Mr. Forbes thunders the opportunity to American enterprise and vigor.

TWO THOUSAND MILLIONS in trade is the prize which world conditions have set before the American people. Europe's tragic extremity becomes, without any working of our own, America's golden opportunity—the opportunity not of a lifetime, but of a century of national life.

The whole rapidly developing trade of South America—to say nothing of other parts of the globe—heretofore almost solely in European, and especially in German hands, is invitingly open to the United States through the annihilation of Europe's foreign trade!

"Ships! ships!—merchant ships!" is the cry of American farmer and producer everywhere.

If there was ever a time when private capital was safe in an investment in merchant ships, either by building or by purchase, now, by every process of commercial logic, is the time. And the government by wise and liberal laws should protect these investments that look so clearly to the growth and glory of our commerce.

And the government itself, which has just voted $700,000,000 for the Alaskan railway on a plan of development, has here a far clearer and much louder call to public interest and national prosperity in this necessity for ships.

Congress seems to have the best of intentions in this matter, but is at a loss to know what to do. So far some of the things that a well-meaning Congress has done might better have been left undone. Congress has actually in some lines come near to throwing away the few advantages we now have in order to reach after the things we have not.

Congress lacks direction. Congress lacks information. Congress needs above all things expert counsel and advice in going about this vitally important work.

There are many able men in the two houses of Congress who are well informed upon questions of economic and political interest. It is doubtful if there is in either chamber a thorough student or an expert upon this great vital present question of our merchant marine.

Therefore the best thing for Congress to do is to summon to conference at once men who do know much in detail upon these pressing questions.

Why should not a powerful Congressional special committee on our merchant marine be formed for immediate and heroic action? Why should not the committee call before it within the next fortnight the experts of the marine? There are fine, earnest, patriotic men who know all the difficulties and possibilities of this question and whose minds are keen for service—practical men, like E. Platt Shatton, chief superintendent of the American Bureau of Shipping of New York; Harvey D. Goulden of Chicago, counsel for the Marine Labor Commission and legal expert for the shipping of the Great Lakes; A. R. Smith, president of the Merchant and Manufacturing Board of Trade of New York and editor of the New York Marine News, a student and practical thinker and authority of many years upon this big question of our merchant marine.

J. J. Hill and other practical and experienced handlers of shipping and masters of trade would be glad to go to Washington at once and help Congress DO SOMETHING VITAL and strong and PRACTICAL to meet the magnificent opportunities of our country at this time.

Why should Congress wait?

If this thing is worth doing at all—and it certainly is worth doing—it is worth doing it well and doing it quickly.

If George IV., returning from his observant tour of the world's conditions, cried from the throne, "WAKE UP, ENGLAND!" so now comes timely and clear the shout of the American business watchman, capital:

"WAKE UP, AMERICA!"

Measuring Star Distances

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q. "Have the distances of any other stars from the earth been measured besides the one that requires light four years to reach us?"—Carlos G. Ade, No. 1 Union Square, New York.

A.—Yes, quite a number approximately. Here is a table giving the distances of a number of the brighter stars in light years:

Names of Stars—	Distances in Light Years.
Alpha Centauri	4.35
Sirius	8.70
Procyon	10.10
Altair	11.10
Fomalhaut	22.60
Vega	34.70
Arcturus	43.50
Aldebaran	44.70
Capella	50.80
Pollux	60.00
Regulus	99.00
Betelgueux	109.00
Antares	112.00
Canopus	466.00
Deneb ola	500.00
Rigel	466.00
Spica	500.00

The term light year is the distance traversed by light in free space during one sidereal year. The number of seconds in a sidereal or star year is 31,558,149, and the set specific speed of light is 186,330 miles per second. Go multiply these numbers together and the product will be miles per year.

These distances above 100 light years are liable to errors of at least 15 per centum. Select fifty skilled mechanics from as many workshops; let them measure the diameter of a spider's thread, fibre of silk, thinnest platinum wire or very fine hair.

Estimates of the brightness have been made thus: Of Canopus, 16,000; Procyon, 4,000; Spica, 2,000; Betelgeuse, 1,400; Rigel, 250; Formalhaut, 25 times that of our sun. Thus our sun is one of the smaller and less brilliant stars.

There are hundreds of millions of suns in the Milky Way; some may be and doubtless are larger than even Canopus. And their light may require 1,000, 5,000, 10,000 or even up to 50,000 years to speed over their mighty distances. This cannot be proved, however, because no measuring power that can be made by man could hope to see the radius of the earth's orbit, or a line 32,000,000 miles long, from the Milky Way.

"Were people from Asia here in the Americas before historic times?"—P. N. N., Tacoma, Wash.

A.—Yes. I might fill a whole page of the AMERICAN with proofs. I was in a railway cut through a hill in Mexico. The workmen excavated an idol about three inches long. It had a peculiar headdress and the face was Oriental. I brought it home, compared it with pictures of idols from ancient Egypt, and they were precisely alike. Of course there were Asiatics in both North and South America many thousands of years ago. Proofs are convincing.

AFTER THE WEDDING

AN ILLUSTRATED STORY OF THE WAY A HOME WAS MADE

"Oh, I'm so happy"—

Tom walked nervously up and down in the reception room of the hospital. He had been there since daylight, waiting and wondering and hoping that everything would be all right. Always looking anxiously toward the door for one of the nurses to come in and say that the little stranger had arrived and that he could go up and see Jennie at last. There was one other man in the reception room. Tom had not noticed him there, but now saw that this man was nervously lingering his hat brim, then he would go and look out of the window with his hands clenching and relaxing. Suddenly he turned to Tom as if he was going to speak, then thought better of it and looked out of the window again.

Tom walked up to him and extended his hand. And in that handshake there was that mutual, silent understanding that comes to few men and was the beginning of a life-long friendship. "The last one we had died, and its mother nearly died, too, but you'll pardon me, please. I'm a bit unstrung and haven't slept for a week."

All this the man said in a very disjointed manner, but Tom understood thoroughly. Finally a nurse came to the door and beckoned to the man. As he was going out Tom heard the nurse say everything was fine and that it was a boy. As the door closed again all Tom could think of was what the man had said to him, and he silently prayed that everything would be all right with Jennie.

Then Jennie's nurse came in and told him that now he could go up and see his wife. Tom was dazed and hardly realized what he was doing as he walked along the corridor. The nurse opened the door of Jennie's room, and, after Tom went in, closed it again, leaving them alone, except for a little pink face lying curled up in Jennie's arm. As Tom leaned over to kiss her, Jennie whispered, "Oh, I'm so happy; it's a GIRL."—H. C.

Girls Shouldn't Finance Men

That Is the Swiftest Way to Kill Love

By DOROTHY DIX

A YOUNG GIRL who makes a good salary is in love with an impecunious youth who is just starting on a college course. The girl wants to know what I think about her financing the young man's education and supporting him while he goes to school. She says that to do this would require her to make many sacrifices, that she would have to skimp and pinch and economize in every possible way in the present, but that she feels that she would be gloriously happy in the future when the young man came home with his diploma and married her.

My advise to her is—DON'T. Don't do it, little girl, as you value your money and value your love. There are many ways to kill love, but none is so swift and sure and deadly as for a woman to put a man under financial obligations to her.

Take your money and buy Wild Cat preferred. Back a scheme for raising the treasure of Captain Kidd from the depths of the ocean. Buy a gold brick from a sick Indian who has a hidden mine if you are bound to throw away what you earn. All of these are gilt-edged investments compared to speculating in a sweetheart. That is a risk so great and hazardous that no plunger on earth except a fool woman would even think about taking it.

Sit down quietly in your room and size up the situation, little girl. First consider the character of the man who would take the hard earnings of a working girl. If you were a millionaire and wanted to bestow a few thousands that you'd never miss on him it might not matter, although personally I think that the education that is bought at the price of a man making a mendicant of himself costs more than it comes to. Still, if you had lots of money and he had none, the man might justify himself in taking part of it.

But how can he justify himself in his own eyes, or in your eyes, for taking your few little dollars, every one of which represents some pitiful economy, some crucifixion of a need or taste, some hour of weariness? Any man who had one spark of manliness or independence in him would die before he would touch such money. Any man who had one throb of love in his heart for a working girl would perish before he would let her spend her hard-earned money on him.

There are some things that a real man just can't do, and one of them is to make a ladder by which to climb upon the tender, soft young shoulders of a girl. He doesn't crush the girl he pretends to love in his efforts to get on, and so, before you invest in such a man, look him over and see if you don't think he's a pretty poor bargain, and not worth the price.

Also, little girl, turn a calmly appraising eye on the future and try to visualise to yourself what is sure to happen. Suppose you do spend all your money on educating this young man. At the best you must put in from four to six years of the hardest kind of work, and of anxiety and waiting. You will have to live poorly and deny yourself all the pleasures of your time of life, all the little luxuries, all the good clothes that go far toward helping a woman along in business.

The inevitable result will be that you will age under the process, that you will lose your good looks and, unless you are a marvel of self-control, that you will get peevish and sour. Also, with you in the counting-room and him in the college, he is practically sure to outgrow you mentally.

Do you think that he will come back then and marry you? Or, if he does marry you, that he will marry you from any feeling but a sense of duty? And if he does marry you, do you think that you will be a congenial and harmonious couple? Believe me, little sister, there are no husbands and and wives so widely separated as those who have the width of an education between them.

Of course, the man who wants your money tells you that he will love you forever and a day for giving it to him, and that he will bless your name with gratitude. That is what all borrowers say, and yet the whole consensus of human experience shows that the debtor always hates the person to whom he is under obligation. This has passed into a proverb, so that we say that when you lend money to a friend you lose your friend and your money both.

If this is true of transactions between men, it is doubly true when the woman is the giver and the man is the beneficiary. The sense of dependence on a woman is gall and wormwood to a man, and he hates her for the very favors that he accepts.

Many rich women marry poor men, but not once in a thousand times are such marriages happy, no matter how generous and tactful the wife is in dealing with her husband. Many men sit down supinely and let their wives support them, but you will never see in such a household a husband who is not like the ill-tempered dog that bites the hand that feeds it.

You can buy many things with money, little girl, but you can't buy a real man and real love. The most that you can get is an imitation man coddled up with a lot of hot air about affection, and gratitude, that won't pan out pure gold in the test of life. Don't waste your money on such worthless truck. It isn't worth the price of a single hour's extra work or the cutting down on a single lunch.

And remember this, little girl—be suspicious of the man who reaches out for your pocketbook while he makes love to you. He's no Romeo. He's a con artist, and he has taken you for an easy mark. Don't be silly enough to fall for him.
